How will educators truly access what the scholars know or does not know?

Currently, scholars are just trying to get bell ringers, and assign work completed by 3 pm or 11:59 pm. The result in some cases is a poor test score.

How will you make adjustments in current teachings, whether in person or flex learning to prepare all scholars for state and district testing?

If scholars are not fully retaining information, and just trying to meet deadlines, how will they be prepared for major state and district testing?

How will the current pandemic situation affect state and district testing?

It's important because of the lack of in person or live instructional online teaching that is needed for students.

How is the district going to ensure that remote students are prepared for the assessments? They are just given assignments in Schoology to complete.

This is important because my son would have had all of his EOCs done by the end of the past school year and I want him to be prepared. He's high risk,

Why are progress reports coming out, yet there are empty grades in Skyward?

It shouldn't take a teacher weeks to put grades in. There should be a minimum number of grades entered per week.
